Points of Interest

In Kitchen Fire Suppression Systems all sources of fuel supplying appliances under a hood shall shut off upon activation of the system. The natural gas is normally shut off via a Mechanical Gas Valve (right). When the system activates through either automatic or manual means this valve automatically closes and eliminates the gas supply to all appliances downstream of the valve. Typically only one valve is needed. All sources of fuel shut off (for both electric power and natural gas) shall have a manual resetting function.
